UKTA's mission

The UK Thermography Association (UKTA) is a professional association for everyone involved with thermography. Dedicated to excellence in all infrared imaging applications, supporting, promoting and expanding infrared imaging and measurement. UKTA was formed to network individuals, organisations and associations in the thermography profession in the UK and the rest of the world and has alliances with other authorities and associations with similar objectives in other countries.

Thermography is used to detect a rise or fall in temperature in buildings, machines, animals – in fact anything that causes a temperature difference on the surface.

To get the most out of thermography you need an understanding of what the thermal images and the temperatures mean.

The UKTA is a forum for learning and discussion on all things thermographic. It promotes high standards in thermography and unites thermographers, customers and anyone interested in thermography.

Who needs thermography?

Thermography is a technique that is becoming increasingly popular throughout the world. There are countless applications for industry, energy conservation, veterinary science, ecology, medical imaging and military use, to name just a few.

Benefits of membership

User groups

Join the user and working groups that interest you and meet others with similar problems and experience in thermography applications, including:

- Building fabric
- Plant condition monitoring
- Electrical
- Process monitoring
- Non-destructive evaluation
- Remote sensing
- Medical/veterinary.

Network/information exchange

Network and information exchange with other thermography practitioners and those related to the profession. The UKTA liaises with thermography networks and user groups worldwide, including those of all equipment manufacturers. International networking is assisted by affiliation with the European thermography association.

Training and certification

Receive training in thermography and its applications from the UKTA member companies and accredited training organisations. Get thermography certification to the latest ISO standards to help show your competence in thermography and its applications.

Publications

All full members receive Insight, the monthly journal of the British Institute of NDT, and its NDT News and Condition Monitor newsletters.

Benchmarking/standards

Help develop standards that will maintain high levels of professional excellence in thermography. The UKTA is represented on British and International standards bodies. Tap into the experience of others to identify quickly what works and what does not, improving and continually upgrading professional standards.

Meetings

Meetings and seminars are held at convenient locations around the UK. These comprise technical awareness presentations, site visits and demonstrations, sometimes followed by a business meeting or the AGM.

Conferences and events

Thermography conferences are held at different locations worldwide each year, organised by national or international associations. The UKTA participates at the British Institute of Non-Destructive Testing's well-established Condition Monitoring Conference, held every summer, and its Non-Destructive Testing Conference, held every autumn. Members of the UKTA are able to book places at many thermography-related conferences at reduced rates.

UKTA website – www.ukta.org

The UKTA website is a valuable source of information for members as well as anyone else with an interest in thermography. The website also acts as an excellent marketing tool for members who can register their details for the 'Find a Thermographer' page, which guides end users straight to you and your business.
